RUHRGEBIET: A HISTORICALLY INDUSTRIAL EPICENTER

Located in the western state of North Rhine-Westphalia, the Ruhr area (Ruhrgebiet) is the largest urban area in Germany. The 53 cities and towns in this area, including Duisburg, Essen, and Dortmund, play an integral role in the German economy. Similar to Pittsburgh, the Ruhr area is historically known as an industrial epicenter, especially in coal-mining and steel-production. Nowadays, companies in the Ruhr area draw on their industrial roots to propel their innovative technologies forward.
